

This interest is mainly associated with the properties that these materials offer, such as high surface area, high permeability (intercommunicating pores), low density, low specific heat, high thermal and acoustic insulation and high chemical resistance. Glass foams are resistant to water and water vapor and do not burn