

Why are some countries so rich? A country's wealth is usually measured by its gross domestic product (GDP), because we are more interested in people's lives – sustainable economic growth is one of the main goals of the SDGs. These are macroeconomic questions since our ancestors began studying the mechanism of economic growth and development written by Koki Oikawa and Published on 03 December 2022. If they could, how