

Plastic is everywhere. We talk on it, we drive in it, and we make heart valves and artificial joints with it. Despite the many improvements plastic has made to our modern lives, its global mismanagement has led to its widespread release into the environment ('plastic pollution'), with disastrous environmental consequences.