

optical communication has major advantages at long distances, but the implication is that electrical communication is preferable at short enough distances