

I believe communication has been both improved and hindered by technology. People often prefer texting over talking in person, which can make our connections feel less personal and meaningful. But on the other hand, it's also made face-to-face interactions less frequent