Erythromycin and tylosin in foods and water are low because their usage has decreased compared with the past decades.