

To lower child mortality and improve health outcomes, it is crucial to identify severe acute malnutrition (SAM) in children under the age of five as soon as possible. AUCs (areas under receiver–operator characteristic curves) and sensitivity, as well as the percentage of false positives, were computed. 55 percent of infants with SAM identified with combined approaches were detected with MUAC