

Traffic congestion in Manama is a significant problem attributed to inadequate road infrastructure and excessive reliance on personal vehicles. By taking a multi-faceted approach, the city can alleviate congestion, improve the quality of life for residents, and create a more sustainable transportation system. Collaboration between city officials, urban planners, and stakeholders is essential to implement these solutions.