

I) The underlying assumptions of social work are: (1) Social work like all other professions has problem-solving functions. (3) Social work as a profession came into being and continues to develop because it meets human needs and aspirations recognized by society (4) Social work practice takes its values from those held by the society of which it is a part. (2) Social work practice is an art with a scientific and value foundation.