

A black boy compares himself to a white English boy, and at first finds himself wanting. The speaker ends by saying he will tell the English boy this truth and look forward to the day when both of them have put off this cloud and can love one another truly.