

March 6th–Annoying Situations A It always gets on my nerves when people talk in the movie theater, but you won't believe what has happened to me tonight! Posted by: Suzy, 03/7, 13:15 Well, I have to travel on public transportation every day and there are plenty of things that annoy me. A few days ago, though, it was a boiling hot day and when my train pulled into the station and I saw the bodies pressed against the door, my heart sank. From the moment we sat down, a group of teenagers behind us didn't stop talking and laughing, and even chatting on their cellphones. While we were trying to decide what to order, we heard some strange noises coming from the table behind us. It was a man slurping his soup really loudly. Almost immediately, an usher appeared and angrily told me to leave. Tell me all about it and cheer me up! Posted by: Liam, 03/6, 22:14 2 responses: Oh, that's awful, Liam. The final straw was when he sneezed loudly without covering his mouth and a piece of bread flew out of his mouth and onto our table. I turned around and shouted at them. I've never enjoyed the polluted air of the city so much. It wasn't my fault