

Fever Coach Christie Sides Draws Intense Backlash After Caitlin Clark, Indiana Statement. While there are still Indiana Fever fans out there who have faith in head coach Christie Sides' ability to lead this team, there are also more than a few supporters out there who no longer believe that she is the right woman for the job. Indiana is currently 2.5 games behind the sixth-placed Phoenix Mercury. "And I say fans, because obviously the team ownership is absolutely incompetent, and is pointless to plead with them. Only fans can make a difference. If you Indiana folks could please grow a set and start booing sides or start up a chant during games, etc. Gotta make it awkward and uncomfortable," suggested a reader. Dear Fever owner, if your sights are set on the playoffs and advancing, please fire Coach Sides. Sides has been constantly criticized throughout the season, particularly with how she has handled Caitlin Clark's landscape-shifting arrival in the WNBA. In a recent statement, Sides revealed her goals for Indiana this season, stating that getting into the playoffs is the team's primary objective. Just remember this, fans: for every day that Christie Sides is not fired, that's LESS time for the new coach (that they'll inevitably eventually get) to instill their system, beliefs, etc. Generally, Sides' critics are adamant that the Fever should be in a much better position than they are at the moment now that they have Clark leading the charge.