

Ways to help end Child Labour 1) Support Fair trade– Be conscious of the products you buy. If its too 5 cheap to be true, it was probably made by underpaid, overworked children in crammed factories. 2) Get informed– Educate yourself about the problems and what your government is doing about it. Participate in discussions with your family, friends and colleagues. 3) Sponsor education– If possible, help in sponsoring the education of a child from the poorer countries in Africa or Asia. There are several NGOs on the internet helping to connect donors with needy children. 4) Make ethical investments– As an investor or share holder, support companies that are sustainable and ethical with humane practices that don't include child labour. 5) Support NGOs, initiatives and Campaigns: Get vocal and involved in fundraisers and campaigns. We have compiled a list below on initiatives that you can start with. Get active against child labour ● Join the #ReadtheWorld initiative from UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, which seeks to bring stories to children during times of isolation in the COVID-19 Pandemic. ● The 'Action!Kidz' project from Kindernoithilfe – which shows children working in the household and garden of relatives and friends to draw attention to exploitative child labour worldwide. ● Check this online phone App to find out which companies are ethical and enforcing just conditions of work without forced or bonded labour during manufacturing. ● Sign the petition "Initiative Supply Chain Law" ● Watch this video and inform yourself about challenges to existing child labour conditions, especially in agriculture. ● Support organisations that stand up against child labour like FAO, Bread for the world, SOS Children's Villages Worldwide, Plan International, UNICEF
