

A power system is made up of interconnected equipment that can be described in different three layers from the point of view of the functions performed