

The first musical instruments used by musicians were the clappers, or castanets, in ancient Egypt. Later, the clappers were hollowed down and transformed into a pear-shaped instrument made of hardwood like ebony or rosewood. The ancient Egyptian goddess of music Hathor was said to be represented by the clapping sound the instrument produced.