

Mathematical finance provides the foundation for creating new and sophisticated financial instruments, such as derivatives and structured products