

We use both fields together because the electric field accelerates the electrons, while the magnetic field helps determine their path, allowing a more accurate calculation of the charge-to-mass ratio.