

The main interior section is designed to allow a precise amount of natural daylight to enter the library atrium, symbolizing the connection between the library and the outside world. The corrugated glass facade reflects natural daylight into the space without glare or brightness, aiding in reading and social interaction activities. The bookshelves are designed to appear as a natural part of the building itself, standing out from the ground, symbolizing the high value of books