

Aluminum oxide layers have been prepared and doped with nickel using a low cost spray pyrolysis process onto glass substrates. These improvements could positively impact the properties and durability of the coating by enhancing its corrosion resistance and ensuring material protection