

Demonstrate to your children the value of education – that's one of the most important ways a parent can encourage their learning. If parents succeed in convincing their children of the importance of education and can mobilize the resources to provide support, children typically stay in school and do well. This is true the world over, although parents have various ways to highlight this value. Many of the important contributions from parents do not require money or qualifications. can open a discussion