

Yes, she definitely left the audience with a clear sense of purpose. In her final message, she encouraged people to take Rabin's values and actually apply them in their own lives -- whether through promoting peace, being more responsible, or taking an active role in their community