

Leaving a job vacant for extended periods can significantly impact a company's finances. Hiring the wrong person can be costly, with an average cost of nearly £15,000 per bad hire. Therefore, efficient recruitment and selection processes help companies save money by ensuring they find and choose the right candidates for each open position.