

While all of these B vitamins work with enzymes to support your body's functions in a variety of ways — from transporting nutrients throughout the body to releasing energy from carbs and fats — they each have benefits all on their own