

once the country mouse i of the roads and he came across a weak wolf that could not move, so he went to him and asked him what happened to you?The wolf quickly went away and retracted his desire to work with the dog, after telling him that it was better for him to withstand hunger and thirst while he was free, not to put up with slavery when he was fat, and so the story ended.The wolf said to him that he was very hungry, and he perished from hunger and almost died, so the dog said to him: Why don't you work like me to receive abundant food and drink every day, and not be weak like this?He should not give up his freedom for something no matter how valuable it is.nvited