

A three-dimensional figure that consists of two parallel congruent circular regions (called bases) and a lateral surface containing segments connecting each point on the circular boundary of one base to the corresponding point on the circular boundary of the other