

Examining how fast food consumption affects rates of obesity among college students, this study seeks to identify the causal connection between dietary choices and lifestyle practices to provide insight into the possible impact of fast food consumption on obesity prevalence in this population