

If the donor and recipient have similar HLA types, the recipient's immune system is less likely to reject the transplanted organ.