

Dr. Ethical Leadership: He put patient care above loyalty to his colleagues. Karam showed outstanding ethical integrity and professional bravery by reporting Dr. Aban's negligence and eventually resigning because of the ongoing quality problems. His decisions were driven by a focus on patient safety and medical duty, especially when he took the initiative to re-examine 100 mammograms and found significant diagnostic mistakes. This demonstrates a strong dedication to quality care, particularly when the administrative leaders did not respond quickly. Initiative and Diligence: He took independent actions to verify diagnostic issues. Although his resignation was unfortunate, it served as a strong protest that highlighted the systemic problems within the department. Courage in Advocacy: He reported problems even with the risk of personal repercussions. His appointment would strengthen a culture of accountability and focus on patient-centered care. If Dr. Karam were to be given a managerial position, he would be the best fit for the role of Director of Medical Quality and Patient Safety. There are four reasons that support this decision: 1.2.3.4
