

A lazy and poor son, remembering his father's words about a hidden treasure, dug the entire field for days, hoping to find it. However, he found nothing. A passerby advised him to plant seeds instead. Heeding the advice, the son grew crops, sold them in the market, and became rich. Through this experience, he realized that the true treasure wasn't buried in the field but rather in the value of hard .work