

Upon reaching the end of the design phase, there is an output referred to as the system specification, which comprises of different design documents with their functioning descriptions. Why is this deliverable a consolidated or summary presentation and what is the importance behind it? It's pivotal because it promotes the synthesis of many viewpoints, thus weaving the consistency and clarity of the process, as well as eliminating the confusion and ensuring the alignment