

The combustion of fossil fuels releases pollutants into the air and water, contributing to air and water pollution. Renewable energy sources produce electricity without burning fuel, eliminating emissions of harmful pollutants such as sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides, and particulate matter.