

Before the gases exit the exhaust, they go through a few stages. Finally, the gases exit the exhaust nozzle, creating the thrust that propels the aircraft forward. First, the hot gases are produced by burning fuel in the engine's combustion chamber