

The superior and anterior inferior cerebellar arteries supply blood to the cerebellum. These processes are disturbed by this haemorrhage, which can also compress the fourth ventricle or brainstem. The cerebellum is in charge of balance and coordination.