

Inside the bustle of the city, all kinds of sounds fill the air, which interfere with each other like vying musicians. It's a relentless heartbeat that pushes things into night. In firecrackerlike succession, the smell of grilling food on street side mixes with the fumes of gaseous states