

Norway, a small country with a population of 5.5 million, has won more medals at the Winter Games than any other country. Norwegians go cross-country skiing, ski jumping, or downhill skiing on weekends, on holidays, and after work. A rock carving in the Nordland county provides evidence that the use of sleds dates back to the Stone Age. Norwegians have enjoyed skiing for thousands of years.