

Basel IV tightens the reins on IRB by introducing the output floor. A bank's IRB-calculated capital needs cannot fall below 72.5% of what the standardized approach dictates