

Pharmacy was practiced in ancient ages as people used the water, plants and earth around them for soothing compresses on wounds and diseases. In the region of ancient Mesopotamia in the city of Babylonia the earliest known record of the practice of pharmacy by the priest, pharmacist, and physician was kept (around 2600 BC).⁷