

My internship at Nesma & Partners provided an invaluable opportunity to gain practical experience in the supply chain domain. Balancing competing priorities, managing supplier expectations, and navigating complex procurement processes were among the key challenges I faced. My exposure to local content deepened my appreciation for the complexities involved in promoting local content and the role of government regulations in shaping procurement strategies. Finally, my time in subcontract management sharpened my analytical skills as I learned to assess vendor capabilities and ensure compliance with legal requirements. I honed my ability to manage multiple tasks simultaneously while ensuring the timely delivery of essential materials and services. Throughout my internship, I encountered various challenges that demanded problem-solving and adaptability. However, these experiences fostered resilience and critical thinking, allowing me to develop effective strategies to overcome obstacles. Through rotations in procurement, local content, logistics, and subcontract management, I developed a comprehensive understanding of the company's operations. I am grateful for the mentorship and guidance provided by my colleagues, which significantly contributed to my overall development. The opportunity to contribute to the company's projects and interact with diverse teams has been immensely rewarding. Reflecting on my internship, I am proud of the skills and knowledge I have acquired.
