

The behaviourisms theory of second language acquisition views language learning as a process of habit formation, shaped by positive reinforcement and repetition