Artificial intelligence today is commonly referred to as narrow AI (or weak AI) because it is specifically created to complete a limited task, such as facial recognition, internet searches, or driving a car.