

Tubular ice is produced by freezing a falling film of water either on the outside of a tube with evaporating refrigerant on the inside, or on the inside of tubes surrounded by evaporating refrigerant on the outside