

Although they increase the dynamic capacity of an aisle, parking angles of less than 90° are little used in underground and multi-storey car parks, as the space requirement per bay increases and cost efficiency is reduced.