Shopping In IrelandBeginning in the 1940s, some bigger shops began to appear in Ireland, with the first Dunnes Stores opening up in Cork City in 1943. Instead, people were now able to browse the shelves independently and take a closer look at items on saleShopping in Ireland has changed significantly over the last 100 years. In the early 1900's, most shops in Ireland were small family run businesses located in towns and cities. At this time, shops in Ireland had only been located in towns and cities. But in 1966, Dunnes Stores opened the first out-of-town shopping centre in Ireland at Cornelscourt in Dublin. Shops such as drapers and grocers were the norm and people would queue up to be served. Arnotts opened in 1843 on Henry Street, Dublin and is still open today.
