

WNBA upgrades foul on Caitlin Clark by Chennedy Carter, fines Angel Reese for no postgame interview. The WNBA on Sunday upgraded Chicago Sky guard Chennedy Carter's foul against Indiana Fever rookie Caitlin Clark to a flagrant-1 violation after reviewing the play. The WNBA also fined Chicago $5,000 for failing to ensure that all players comply with league media policies. The league office may reclassify a flagrant foul or upgrade a foul to a flagrant that isn't called during the game. Players accumulate points for flagrant fouls during the regular season and receive suspensions if they reach a certain number. Carter didn't answer questions about Clark or the play after the game. The league fined Sky forward Angel Reese $1,000 for failing to make herself available to media after Saturday's game. In addition, the league may impose a fine or suspend a player for a flagrant foul. Sides praised Clark in her postgame interview Saturday for keeping her composure through all the physical play she's faced this season. The officials called it an away-from-the-ball foul and didn't review the play. The WNBA didn't do either to Carter. Clark finished with 11 points, eight rebounds and six assists
