

People feared that as cities got bigger, living conditions would get worse