

Research methods are the building blocks of the scientific enterprise. Even as personal experiences are rich in depth and detail, and create a lot of meaning in life, they are also quite limited in scope. One way you know a thing is through your own personal experience