

Previously, male elephants were perceived to be less social than females. Then they generally leave their mothers and form other groups with male elephants