

Based on the support and facts mentioned, it can be said that developing skills and acquiring new interests during free time is a valuable investment in personal growth and personal and professional balance.