

Programming refers to a technological process for telling a computer which tasks to perform in order to solve problems