

Carbon's unique properties are what allow it to be a central component of so many different types of molecules. In addition to its chemical properties, carbon is also a very abundant element. It is the 4th most abundant element in the universe and is found in a variety of compounds on Earth. This allows carbon to combine with a wide variety of elements, including hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and others, to form an almost limitless number of different compounds.